

What side effects may I expect following treatment?

Side effects, if they occur, are usually temporary and mild to moderate. As with all prescription medicines, Muscle Relaxants can cause side effects and your clinician will advise you about these in more detail.

Most side effects experienced by patients are short-lived and are linked to the injections e.g. pain after treatment, redness, swelling etc temporary and mild to moderate.

Other side effects such as ptosis (drooping of the upper eyelid), Whilst still temporary in nature can be caused by a spread of the Injected product into nearby muscles.

Choosing an experienced injector will minimise (but not eliminate) the risk of such side effects. Muscle Relaxants contains a specially prepared naturally occurring protein that originates from bacteria.

Although Muscle Relaxant is a new name, the purified protein it contains has been used in clinical practice under the name BOTOX® for more than 10 years. This extensive experience confirms the established safety profile of treatment with Muscle Relaxants, Other preparations are available to manage facial lines and you should discuss the various treatments and their differences with your clinician so that the effect you get is the one you want.

A minute quantity of Muscle Relaxants is injected into the muscles that cause dynamic lines, for example frown lines. The injection temporarily prevents nerve signals from reaching the muscle and, as a result, the muscle relaxes. As the muscle relaxes, the skin smoothes out. Treatment can take as little as 10 minutes and most people return to normal activities immediately afterwards.

Muscle Relaxant injections for wrinkles

This procedure can have remarkable results in improving the wrinkles resulting from hyperactive facial muscles. It is used to treat frown lines between the eyebrows, horizontal forehead lines and 'crows feet' around the eyes.

The muscle relaxant is injected with a very fine needle.

After the injection, the muscles will relax and the skin will smooth itself out over a period of 5-14 days.

The result is a softer, more relaxed and pleasant appearance. The effect usually lasts about six months and can be repeated when needed. Most patients require less frequent treatments over time as the muscles 'retrain' and weaken from disuse.
